Writing submission

Document: "Entertainment Center User Guide"
Devon Apple

This writing sample explains how to use an entertainment center. The document was produced using the Oxygen XML suite of programs, using DITA principles.

I wrote all of the content for this sample.

This sample is my original writing.

The document is based on direct experience, as well as content adapted from published documentation for individual media devices.

This sample document has not received any editing attention.

There was no company style guide that applied to this document.

The sample is an orientation guide that I created for family members to navigate the media devices in the house's common area entertainment center. This document provides guides and walkthroughs for each device, and 6 use cases for the media center.

This document was not part of a larger documentation set.